

Wear a face covering

Coronavirus (COVID-19) usually spreads by droplets from coughs, sneezes and speaking. The best available scientific evidence is that, when used correctly, wearing a face covering may reduce the spread of coronavirus droplets in certain circumstances, helping to protect others.

Although wearing a face covering is no longer a legal requirement, it is still strongly recommended in health and social care settings, on public transport and in enclosed indoor settings, where you come into contact with people you do not usually meet.

By wearing a face covering you are showing your support and consideration for others and playing your part to prevent transmission of the virus.
